

Sometimes the best clinical intervention is

-
- Recovery is a process and an interaction.

Stage Two, Transition, is when the family begins to challenge their reality regarding drinking, beliefs, and behaviors. During Transition, the system needs to stop focusing on itself, and each individual member must begin concentrating on him/herself and dedicate him/herself to his/her individual treatment and recovery. The therapist working with Lana and her mother through this stage

The fourth stage, Ongoing Recovery, is a time when new interests develop or old interests are pursued in a more meaningful way. It is also when the

0