

The restructuring of Europe according to the ideas of Metternich and of the Congress of Vienna, as we have seen, created discontent all over the continent. This discontent quickly erupted into revolutions. The highlights of the revolutions that occurred during the 1820s and the 1830s are examined in this session. Keep in mind, however, that the facts discussed are the culmination of what was going on. There was continual disorder even between these revolutions.

Spencer Discala, PH.D. Copyright 2007